

A lecture on intellectual property rights

The College of Law at Al Falah University organized a lecture on "Copyright" by Dr. Ezzat Al-Omari, as part of the university's campaign to raise awareness on intellectual property rights in cooperation with Dubai Customs.

Dr. Al-Omari pointed out the importance of this lecture in introducing students to the meaning of copyright and the efforts of the UAE in spreading awareness, stressing the need to strengthen cooperation with various community institutions who are in charge of protecting these intellectual property rights. Dr. Al-Omari demonstrated the concept of intellectual property rights that enable the innovator or creator to benefit in various ways from his work or idea until it materializes.

The lecture included students and attendees asking some questions related to the role of the UAE in the field of copyright protection and intellectual property, and the legislation that was stipulated to keep abreast of the latest developments in this field.

Categories:

AFU News

Intellectual Property Rights